Where to Go for Your Donut Fix in San Diego

By Darlene Horn | January 6, 2016

Diets be damned. Donuts are having a moment in San Diego. You'll even find the fried pastries featured on dessert menus at some of the finest restaurants in town, but we much prefer munching out of a cardboard box. When it comes to grab-and-go donut shops in San Diego, we have them in spades — both tried-and-true haunts and some new upstarts offering an artisanal spin. Read on for our 10 favorite San Diego donut shops. Don't forget to cast a vote for your favorite.

Devil's Dozen Doughnuts

You know donuts have hit the big-time locally when a restaurant offers its own take. That's the case for this sister shop to Kettner Exchange in Little Italy that has executive chef Brian Redzikowski in charge of both operations. At Devil's Dozen, you'll find the usual donut classics like cinnamon-sugar, chocolate-glazed and Madagascar vanilla bean alongside churro bites and a rotating daily special sold through the shop's walk-up window.

Insider Tip: If you're looking to eat nearby, head upstairs to the open patio overlooking Little Italy.
